exploratory testing of diatom silica to map the role of material attributes on cell fate pamela j. walsh1,2, susan a. clarke3, matthew julius4 & phillip b. messersmith2,5 porous silica is an attractive biomaterial in many applications, including drug-delivery systems, bone- graft fillers and medical devices. the issue with porous silica biomaterials is the rate at which they resorb and the ... growth anomalies in pecten maximus from coastal waters ... - concurrent events of low growth rate and large bottom-concentrations of algae following diatom blooms (cerataulina pelagica or rhizosolenia delicatula), suggests that this high concentration of phytoplankton on the bottom layer, may affect food intake or respiratory activity of the scallops by gill clogging or oxygen depletion. in this study, silicic acid or phosphorus are inferred to be ... modern diatom assemblages as tools for paleoenvironmental ... - following diatom identification, the data were analysed statistically (i.e. cluster analysis, pca, dca and rda). the present study revealed that there is a great diatom diversity in both estuaries (418 species), with several species new to science. the most important diatom species (with abundances higher or equal to 5%) occur in five ecological groups, which are associated to five distinct ... evolution of shape in diatoms - ucl - diatom during sexual reproduction where the cell is roughly spherical and lacks a silica cell wall. during this development a complex arrangement of silica bands and hoops form on the auxospore, this limits it's expansion and causes the distinctive shape of many diatoms. the precise workings of this process are however largely unknown making it difficult to model. valve classification with all ... a n investigation of the periphytic diatom assemblages in ... - 3.1 diatom species: diversity, richness and environmental preferences a total of 214 diatom taxa were identified from the ditches sampled during 2008 and 2009 in the south of the england and anglesey adding a further 38 taxa to this list recorded for 2007. colonisation and community structure of benthic diatoms on ... - in total, 58 diatom species belonging to 30 genera were identified over the 28-day study. achnanthidium minutissimum, fragilaria biceps, f. ulna var. acus, pinnularia borealis and p. acrosphaeria diatomic vibrational spectra -
